Background

A St. Cloud resident contacted me about completely renovating her home after a recent loss of her husband. She wanted a change of décor to the home, new wood laminate flooring and base cove molding on the upper level, painted ceiling and walls on the upper and main levels, and a remodel of two of her bathrooms that included replacing existing vanity, toilet, mirrors, lighting, and vinyl laminate flooring.

Challenge

The project required a wide variety of changes and it was important that my client was aware of how each step would be done. Another challenge was managing the tasks. Working as a solo contractor on a large project like this required I plan out my strategy for accomplishing each task in line with the client's requested schedule. I communicated and scheduled each step with the client, making sure she was aware when I was going to be in the house. As each room was completed, she could then make the changes she wanted as she moved back into it. On her lunch breaks, she would observe and delight in the transformation.

Solution

I communicated and scheduled each step with the client, making sure she was aware when I was going to be in the house. As each room was completed, she could then make the changes she wanted as she moved back into it.

Results

What she really liked was being able to communicate with me and schedule each step of the renovation process and not have to worry about several other contractors gaining access to her home during the project's duration. I also had the opportunity to meet with the client's boss (an individual who later requested a bathroom remodel for a rental of his) who said that my client's mood and energy improved daily as changes occurred around the house, excited about each change. She continues to have more changes in the works, looking to work more on the lower level in spring and water seal her deck when the weather warms up.
